

Status report on the Middle East conflict

Einsiedeln, March 9th, 2026

Dear customers

Due to several enquiries we have already received from our customers, we would like to provide you with a brief statement on the current situation. At STEINEL Solutions, we are closely monitoring geopolitical developments and dynamics on the global raw materials and transport markets. Although we do not currently foresee any immediate restrictions on our ability to deliver, the situation remains volatile and difficult to predict. Therefore, all statements regarding material availability, delivery times and price developments are non-binding and subject to change at short notice due to external factors.

We are seeing increased market movement, particularly in logistics, plastics, aluminium and individual electronic components, which may have a potential impact on lead times, costs and availability. As the specific effects depend on the project and cannot be reliably predicted, our focus is on providing you with the best possible support for your planning. And predictability is achieved above all through commitment.

For secure and reliable project execution, we therefore strongly recommend that you place your orders early and with commitment. Only in this way can we reserve materials, check alternatives and optimally secure capacities along the entire supply chain. The earlier we know your requirements, the better we can work together to reduce risks and secure your delivery dates.

We will continue to keep you informed in a transparent manner and are available at any time to answer project-specific questions.

If you would like to arrange a joint meeting to assess the market situation and discuss the necessary steps, please contact our sales team.

We are happy to answer any questions you may have.
